

Santa Barbara

MAGAZINE

HOLIDAY HOT LIST

TINSEL &
TAMALES

NEOPRENE
DREAMS

EDITORS'
GIFT GUIDE

GOLDEN COMPASS

NOELLE WOLF, A NEW FACE IN PHILANTHROPY

WINTER 2015

HALLOWED GROUND

All roads lead to Santa Fe, New Mexico

SEVEN THOUSAND FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL, the delineation between earth and sky is virtually nonexistent, save for the outline of the Sangre de Cristo mountain range, a rouge alpenglow silhouette against a dusky desert scape. It's little wonder then that for the Pueblo natives, psychedelic hippies, artisans, and year-round visitors, SANTA FE remains a divine destination. The otherworldly Relais & Chateaux sanctuary The Inn of the Five Graces, 505-992-0957, fivegraces.com, is a vividly colorful expression of Latin decor accentuated by global artifacts and Eastern luxury. Near the downtown buzz, Canyon Road solidifies Santa Fe's repute as an epicenter for Western art and culture. Case in point: the authentic exhibits at Giacobbe-Fritz Fine Art, 505-986-1156, giacobbefritz.com. Housed in an 18th-century adobe, Geronimo's, 505-982-1500, geronimorestaurant.com, is known for its intimate amber-hued interior and globally inspired dishes. Craving wide open spaces? Escape to Ten Thousand Waves, 505-982-9304, tenthousandwaves.com, where, surrounded by dense pine forests, the spa's Ichiban bathing rooms (modeled after traditional Japanese hot springs) warm the soul and relieve sore muscles from mornings at the nearby ski slopes.

-ANGELIA DE MEISTRE-HAMMER

One of the Ira and Sylvia Seret-designed rooms at The Inn of the Five Graces.

Geronimo's refined yet rustic-modern interior.