DUNTON HOT SPRINGS

Dolores, CO

The vibe: Ghost town for the rich and famous

Back in the late 1800s, residents of the Dunton mining camp—tucked away in Colorado's San Juan Mountains—suffered from extreme isolation. These days, that remote location is exactly what lures travelers, who plunk down more than $500 a night to stay in the perfectly restored ghost town. Its handful of hand-hewn cabins—many built by the original miners—are situated just steps from natural hot springs. The “Dolores” cabin (pictured) features a riverside deck and a wedding bed from Rajasthan, India. From $550/night, duntonhotsprings.com

THE INN OF THE FIVE GRACES

Santa Fe, NM

The vibe: Your own little Taj Mahal

Ira and Sylvia Seret's East-meets-West style is evident in their Santa Fe showroom, Seret & Sons—which overflows with exotic rugs and antiques—and at The Five Graces, their inn in Santa Fe's 17th-century Barrio de Analco historic district. Its 24 fanciful guest rooms brim with treasures: hand-painted Tibetan ceilings and Afghani beams, rich carpets, and hand-carved headboards and marble screens. The “Lapis” room (pictured) features a bathroom covered in floor-to-ceiling tile mosaics by Sylvia Seret. From $340/night, fivegraces.com

AMANGANI

Jackson, WY

The vibe: A mountain man's stylish lair

Have you ever stayed in a hotel room so elegant, you wished you had brought less stuff to clutter it with? You'll feel that way at Amangani, where the look is at once rustic—think pine-stump tables, woven-cowhide chairs and faux-wolf fabrics—and minimalist, with backlit cedar-plank walls, crisp white linens and metal fireplaces. The idea is to honor the surroundings without overshadowing their natural beauty. And when those surroundings are Wyoming's majestic Tetons, it really is best to step back and let the views do the work. From $800/night, amanresorts.com/amangani
